Little Obie visits Smoky Lake

By Brandie Majeau

The Smoky Lake Annual Heritage Days and Stampede has once again concluded with resounding success, providing a delightful and family-friendly long weekend for all. The events were a weekend of joy and thrill as families relished a traditional pancake breakfast and indulged in non-stop rodeo action and family-friendly activities, eats and live entertainment. The parade theme, the Train Tracks of Tradition, inspired community members to delve into their historical archives, resulting in phenomenal parade floats that were nothing short of works of art. Pioneers and cowboys came alive as they passed the spectators on vintage wagons, horseback, or tractors. The participant's dedication and the spectacular floats they created this year truly surpassed all expectations.

The excitement was further heightened with the arrival of Little OBIE, who led the procession and carried the parade marshals. Little OBIE, a scale-model CN locomotive, is designed to educate children about railway safety in a way that is both fun and engaging. The initiative, which includes a locomotive, flat-car, and caboose, travels to various community events across Canada and the United States. Created by former CN employee Paul Rose and named after Donald R. "Obie" Bryant, a Safety Director at I.C. Johnson Yard in Memphis, Little Obie uses interactive experiences and safety tips to instruct kids about the dangers of play on or near railroad tracks.

Little Obie's safety education program aims to educate children about railway safety through interactive presentations, safety tips, educational materials, engagement with railway professionals, and community involvement. The program emphasizes staying away from railway tracks, understanding railway signals and signs, and being vigilant near train crossings.

Little Obie effectively imparts crucial safety lessons to children by incorporating enjoyable activities. His engaging approach educates children about the potential risks associated with railways and teaches them how to maintain safety around trains. During his visit to the Town of Smoky Lake, Little Obie delighted the crowd with his presence. Afterward, he took up residence at Pumpkin Park, providing visitors with the opportunity to take photos with him, adding to the overall excitement of the annual Smoky Lake Heritage Days.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Annual Trade Show an informative experience

By Brandie Majeau

The Annual Thorhild & District Agricultural Society and Thorhild County Trade Show and Market was a vibrant and diverse gathering that captivated the interest of both the local community and out-of-town visitors. The Thorhild Agriplex was a hub of activity, offering a full day of engaging and diverse activities for people of all ages. This year's event left a lasting impression with the introduction of a Job Fair, a thoughtful initiative coordinated by the Redwater Chamber of Commerce. The Chamber's services, including resume printing and job search assistance, were invaluable to those seeking employment opportunities in the area.

The Trade Show offered various opportunities to learn about different businesses and organizations within the area and about volunteer opportunities for various not-for-profits. Representatives also explained how to gain education through employment, such as Alberta Health Services and the Health Care Aide Training Program. Westlock Employment Services was also in attendance and gave would-be employees a great start for their job hunt, featuring free assistance with resumes, cover letters, job boards, interview preparation, and access to Wi-Fi, computers, and printers.

The 2024 Trade Show included information sessions and demonstrations on barrel racing and motocross. These sessions provided an opportunity to learn about how to get involved and where to find clubs and organizations to join. The market tables were filled with various products, trinkets, jewelry, artwork, 3D-printed creations, food items, and more. Visitors had the chance to win door prizes and participate in hands-on learning, many walking away with newfound information. The historical societies and sites offered a glimpse into local history, and the not-for-profits highlighted philanthropic work and membership opportunities for locals. There was indeed something for everyone.

The Thorhild Agricultural Society extends its heartfelt gratitude to the dedicated volunteers whose unwavering commitment ensured the trade show's success. They would also like to express their appreciation to the organizations and businesses for their devoted efforts in providing valuable and informative experiences to all the visitors.

Development permits may be unnecessary for small projects

By Brandie Majeau

As we find ourselves in the middle of the summer season, many residents of the Town of Redwater may be considering various home improvement projects. The process of obtaining development permits for such projects could very well be at the forefront of their minds. With the days getting shorter and the fall season on the horizon, homeowners might be feeling the need to finish on-going renovations or kick-start new ones as well.

While some home improvement projects carried out during the summer months may not necessitate development permits, such as specific types of fencing, decks under 2 feet, swimming pools, hot tubs, and accessory buildings under 110 square feet, it is important to ensure that certain criteria are met. This waiver offers homeowners the flexibility to undertake these straightforward home renovations without the added hurdle of obtaining more permits, allowing them to proceed with their plans more easily.

For those interested in taking on do-it-yourself projects or smaller scale renovations, it is recommended to carefully review Section 6.1 of the Land Use Bylaw in order to understand which specific projects do not require development permits.

However, it is also vital to maintain direct communication with the Development Officer at the Town of Redwater. Their assistance and advice will guarantee that all projects, construction work, and renovations adhere to building codes and safety regulations.

This will provide homeowners with the reassurance that they are actively engaged in the process and that their projects are being conducted smoothly and in compliance with the appropriate legal framework.

Removing online accessibility barriers for people with disabilities

March of Dimes Canada is integrating an online accessibility tool into its national operations that allows people with disabilities to personalize their online experiences according to their accessibility needs.

The TD Accessibility Adapter is a browser plug-in designed to co-exist with other assistive technologies and helps address accessibility barriers by enabling users with disabilities such as dyslexia, epilepsy and ADHD to make the websites they visit more user-friendly.

“Our vision is to create an inclusive, barrier-free society for people with disabilities. But, as technology moves at an increasingly rapid pace, we’re seeing more and more barriers like cost and accessibility concerns appear,” says the March of Dimes Canada’s Lesley Smith. “The TD Accessibility Adapter helps address some of those barriers, which is why we’re so excited to leverage the tool with our network – including our employees – to help level the playing field.”

Only three per cent of the internet is currently accessible for people with disabilities, according to WebAIM. And at a time when everyday experiences continue to shift online, people with disabilities are three times more likely than those without to never use the internet, according to a 2021 Pew Research Center survey.

For users with dyslexia, the tool can swap out all the text online and replace it with text that is more spaced out and easily identifiable. Those with ADHD can black out everything on their screens except for the single sentence they’re reading to help them concentrate. Font size and saturation, the vibrancy of the colours on screen, can also be adjusted for users with low vision.

This is one of many accessible technology programs that March of Dimes Canada offers its communities. Its Hi, Tech!, SkillingUp and Tech for Good programs, for example, help people with disabilities build their digital skills and become actively engaged digital citizens.

Stalling in July: Canadian jobs report

By Mark Parsons.
ATB ECONOMICS

More signs of a cooling labour market, reinforcing our call for September rate cut

After the jarring market response to last week's U.S. jobs report, everyone was on high alert for the Canadian numbers delivered today.

The Bank of Canada has indicated that, with inflation cooperating, it is becoming more focused on downside risks. That means watching the jobs data closely.

The report points to further signs of softening. The economy isn't growing enough to consistently add jobs and absorb people looking for work.

Employment was largely unchanged (-2,800) for the second straight month. That's well shy of market consensus (Bloomberg survey) of +25K.

The only reason the unemployment rate held steady at 6.4% was due to a decline in the labour force—the number of people (15+) working or looking for work.

The details show all the net new jobs were full-time, but entirely in the public sector. Over the last 12 months, part time employment (up 3.4%) has far outpaced full-time (1.4%). Meanwhile, the public sector (+4.8%) has outpaced private gains (+0.6%).

A falling job vacancy rate (latest from May) points to further signs of a cooling labour market.

Newcomers and youth are in particular finding it harder to find work. The youth (aged 15 to 24) unemployment rate rose to 14.2%, the highest since September 2012 (outside the pandemic years of 2020 and 2021).

Statistics Canada points to "a much more difficult summer job market for young returning students in 2024 compared with previous years."

Among newcomers to Canada (landed in Canada within the previous five years) the unemployment rate was 12.6% (not seasonally adjusted, three-month moving average), up 3.1 percentage points from the same time last year.

The Bank of Canada has been watching wages closely—one of the main pressure points in the inflation battle. Average hourly earnings remain sticky, up 5.2% year-over-year.

Bottom line: This report reinforces our call for another 25 basis point interest rate cut in September. Slack has built up in the labour market and the economy is clearly in excess supply. It's only a matter of time before persistent wage pressures start to relax. For the Bank to hold in our view, the upcoming inflation reports would need to show a reversal of inflation progress.

Alberta - Jobs, unemployment rate hold steady Alberta employment

was largely unchanged (-0.6K) last month, following a 8.1K gain in June.

Digging into the details, a sizable gain in full time jobs (+46.4K) was offset by a dip in part-time positions (-47K), while small gains in the private and public sector were offset by lower self-employment.

At the industry level, modest gains in goods-producing industries mostly offset service sector declines.

There has been a notable pick-up in oil and gas, mining and forestry employment, reaching its highest level since January 2015. This coincides with stronger oil production in the province, lifted by new market access brought by the Trans Mountain Expansion.

Compared to last July, new private sector (+59K) and full-time (+43K) positions have accounted for the majority of net new employment (+54K).

Alberta's year-over-year pace of job gains (2.2%) remains higher than the national average, but has slowed. Alberta has been adding jobs at a faster annual pace than the rest of the country since March 2022. But it needs to — just to keep pace with even faster labour force growth. New entrants to the labour market have come not only internationally, but from other provinces.

The unemployment

Water Safety: Stay safe with AHS' summer tips

Alberta Health Services (AHS) wants Albertans to stay safe while enjoying the province's lakes and rivers this summer. Following these safety tips will help you avoid serious injury and illness during recreational water activities.

There is always a risk of injury when swimming, especially in unmonitored bodies of water. Here are a few ways you can prevent water-related injuries and illness:

- Wear a proper fitting Canadian-approved life-jacket or Personal Flotation Device (PFD) in a boat, kayak, canoe or other water sports and make sure it fits.

- Make sure young children wear lifejackets when they are in, on, or around the water and be aware of fast-moving water. Stay right beside your child.
- Swim with others when there is no lifeguard present.
- Avoid alcohol, cannabis and any other substance that may affect your judgment before and during water activities.

- Lakes, rivers and streams may contain illness-causing microorganisms.
- Check for recreational water advisories or look for posted advisory signs at public beaches. Not all beaches are monitored for biological, chemical, and physical hazards.
- Do not swim or wade and keep pets out of water in areas where cyanobacterial (blue-green algae) blooms are visible.

- Never drink or cook with untreated water directly from any lake or reservoir, at any time. Water-borne organisms, including fecal bacteria, can cause vomiting and diarrhea.

Swimmer's itch is a rash caused by an allergic reaction to the larvae of certain parasites. The parasites can get under your skin when you swim in lakes, ponds, creeks, streams and rivers. You can't get swimmer's itch from swimming pools that are treated with chlorine.

- Shower and dry yourself off with a towel as soon as you leave the water.
- Stay away from swimming areas that have weeds. Do not wade or swim in those areas.

Alberta Health Services is the provincial health authority responsible for planning and delivering health supports and services for more than four million adults and children living in Alberta. rate held steady at 7.1% on a decline in the labour force participation rate which fell to its lowest since September 2023. Alberta's youth unemployment rate was 14.3%, roughly at national average, and up 1.5 percentage points from the same time last year. Bottom line: Employment growth has slowed in Alberta, and strong labour force entry continues to put upward pressure on the unemployment rate. However, the composition of annual job gains (mostly full-time and private sector) remains more favourable than national trends. With today's report, we are now tracking 2.8-3% average annual employment growth for 2024 with an annual average unemployment rate of 6.8-7%. Our next forecast comes out in September.

Smoky Lake Men's Shed gaining momentum

By Brandie Majeau

The Smoky Lake Men's Shed is part of a global initiative to encourage and enhance men's mental health. Like most Men's Sheds, the program started off small with just a handful of members but has quietly been gaining engagement, momentum, awareness, and members.

In the last 40 years, older men in Australia have been meeting in communal work sheds to socialize, engage in handiwork, and improve their mental well-being. These "Men's Sheds" have since expanded to other parts of the world, including Canada, providing men with a place to connect during retirement. Researchers at the University of Alberta have found that this concept could offer practical mental health support for men in rural areas. Members of Men's Sheds in rural Alberta have reported that the social interaction and support they receive positively impact their mental health. The sheds have the potential to be an affordable way to provide mental health assistance in areas where such services are limited. The voluntary nature of these spaces makes them particularly appealing to men who may be hesitant to seek formal counseling. The camaraderie, inclusion, and purpose that the sheds provide have benefited retired men who may have lost some of their social support after leaving the workforce. The findings suggest that investing in more Men's Sheds could be a valuable initiative to address the needs of self-reliant older men in rural communities.

The group members are lovingly dubbed Sheddies and have created a saying that sums up the unique individuality of each space: "If you've seen one Shed ... you've only seen one Shed!" The concept of Men's Sheds is built on a diverse range of engaging activities that cater to the interests and hobbies chosen by the members themselves. From woodworking to gaming, cooking to metalworking, each Shed offers a unique and exciting array of activities.

This unique community provides a platform for men not only to learn and teach new skills but also to discover fresh opportunities and interests while forming meaningful connections with others. Within the Men's Shed, men are offered a safe and supportive space to work on projects with personal significance. Members have the freedom to work at their own pace, which, at times, is convenient for them, all while enjoying the camaraderie of fellow members.

Additionally, Men's Sheds play a crucial role in combatting feelings of isolation among men. By fostering an environment where men can engage in purposeful activities and contribute to society Men's Sheds offer an invaluable alternative to combat social isolation. For more information about joining the Smoky Lake Men's Shed, contact Robert Winning at robert.winning77@gmail.com or 780-379-7999.
